Peek Inside the Book

We have our own place in the space between windows. Dianne Touchell, Creepy and Maud //

Beginnings are pitiless things; they are full of promise and hope that they never have to realise. Dianne Touchell, Creepy and Maud //

Reader's Opinions

Not being much of a reader of YA fiction this is a hard one for me to rate so I'll let it simmer in my brain for a while. It was most definitely unusual and disturbing in parts but also funny - a bit Adrian Mole, a bit Catcher In the Rye, and the unconventional love story reminded me a bit of...
